A party of about one hundred Norwegians, A party of about one hundred Norwegians, mostly young men, was recently brought across the Atlantic to engage in the furniture manufacture in Clinton County, New York. They are described as strong and rugged physically, and of great worth of character. The person who went over to Norway to secure the services of these immigrants says that great numbers of Norwegians answered his advertisements, and his chief difficulty was to select the few he desired from the crowd of applicants. The United States is highly popular among the laboring classes abroad, and the immigration during 1867, it is estimated, will be greater than that during any provious year.

A SOUTHERN APPEAL. LANCASTERVILLE, SOUTH CAROLINA.

The stranger in Washington, down Louisiana Avenue with his face to the west, sees before him, when he gets to the front of the City Hall, on the south side of the Potomae, and on a commanding eminence, an edifice which, at the distance of three miles from the point of vision, resembles a Greek temple. This is Arlington House, the residence, before the war, of General Robert E. Lee. The Arlington estate was one of the largest, hand-somest and most valuable in the State of Virginia. At an early period of the war the mansion was stripped of everything valuable that could be carried away by soldiers from Pennsylvania and New England. Pictures, mirrors, statuary, rare and costly books, old china and silver plate, were all gobbled up, and sent off to the "loyal" North. These articles are now to be seen in dozens of houses in the States I have named.

A faithful negro servant, who had remained on the place, saw this stealing going on day after day, and at last came ov r to the city, got one of the servants of the White House to secure him an in-terview with Abraham Lincoln, laid the facts before him, and begged him not to permit "Massa Robert's" property to be thus despoiled. Mr. Lincoln's reply, in substance, was said to be that he could not interfere with the military, that the soldiers were only doing at Arlington what they soon would do all over the South; and that as for Bob Leo, he was a traitor, and had no rights which the soldiers were bound to respect.

The result was that the house and grounds were soon made to look like the abomination of Finally, the Government went to work and bu-ried the bodies of 16,000 white soldiers on one side of the house, and the bodies of 1600 negro sol-diers on the other. It is said that the negroes who ive in that vicinity frighten their children by telling them the most frightful ghost stories about these dead bodies.

They say that every night at midnight the ghosts of these 1600 negro soldiers rise from their graves, and dance a Virginia break-down on the graves of their 16,000 white comrades; and that the ghosts of the latter, thus unceremoniously disturbed, arise likewise, and attack the black ghosts; that the fight then rages between the black and white ghosts till 4 A.M., when the black ghosts prevail (one black ghost being more than a match for ten white ones), and drive the white ghosts howling to their sepulchres, when they finish their break-down, and then vanish to their own graves.

A colony of several hundred blacks was established by the Government on another part of the estate, and they were provided with comfortable

BRVB: The distance travellers have to perform in this country are so immense, and the weather is frequently so severe, that the idea of giving a sort of domestic arrangement to the cars naturally occur-red to a people laboring under such disadvantages. Russian railway carriages are little houses on wheels. In the first, and partly in the second class, their interior may be described as a saloon, with all of the necessaries and some of the ele-gancies of such an apartment. It is furnished legal tenders. But should such a measure pass, it would still have to run the gauntlet of the Senate Finance Committee, which is known to be against interfering with the present rate, and it is not at all certain that the Senate itself would not Russian air, but also the aspect of the wintry sky. exchanged, and it is night in the car. The guard and car driver only keeps awake.

During the twenty hours a passenger is whirled along between St. Petersburg and Moscow, the train stops at least twenty times. The stations are elegant buildings, painted red, with broad white facings round the windows and along the eaves. Without the very picture of cleanliness, they are well stocked receptacles of the good things of this world within. The passengers enter a large vaulted hall, scrupulously whitewashed, and paved with flags. On long tables a sumptions repast awaits him, every plate over a lighted lamp to maintain the warmth equally necessary in this country for taste and wholesomeness. The wines and beers of every clime are represented in nume-rous bottles, alternating on the neatly covered tables with steaming plates. The hall is in the bare, cold style so often met with in the country when pomp is not intended.

SPREAD THE TRUTH. Some medical men insist that it is undignified to advertise a remedy, however valuable it may be. Queer reasoning this. It is like saying that an article which the world needs should be hid in a corner—that benefits and blessings may be too widely diffused-that the means of protecting and restoring health should be a close monopoly, and not accessible to all. The argument is bad. It is worse than that; it is inhuman. Suppose HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS-an absolute spe

From SAMUEL HENRY DICKSON, M. D., Professor Practice of Physic, Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, formerly of Charleston, S. C.:

PHILADELPHIA, November 15, 1865.

I have been for a year or more past in the habit of taking the water of the "Excelsior" Spring of Saratoga. Accustomed during the great portion of my invalid life to use the different waters of the several fountains which hold up along that remarkable valley, dependent, indeed. to use the different waters of the several fountains which boil up along that remarkable valley, dependent, indeed, upon them for much of the comfort I enjoy, I am satisfied that the Excelsior Water is as well adapted as any other among them, if not more so, to the purposes for which they are generally employed. It is very agreeable, strongly impregnated with the carbonic acid, lively and sparkling. * * I can heartily and conscientiously recommend it to all who need a gentle cathartic and diurotic.
